Into the Act

NEW YORK—A former Polish secret service officer who once spied for the United States laid claim to the Romanoff millions yesterday for himself and his four sisters — contending that they were the children of Czar Nicholas II. This newest pretender to the once-upon-a-time throne of imperial Russia is Col. Michael Goleniewski, 60, who lives with his wife and baby daughter at an undisclosed Long Island address.

Claims Czar as Father

A new claim to be descended from Czar Nicholas II, this one from a former Polish secret service officer who defected to the West, Michael Goleniewski, 60, who lives with his wife and infant daughter at an undisclosed Long Island address. He made the formal claim to be the czar's only son, the Grand Duke Alexei Nicholaevich, in an afternoon newspaper advertisement, adding that his four sisters are also the four grand duchesses Olga, Anastasia Maria and Tatiana, three of them also now living in this country. He said their claim to their royal identities has been smothered for 47 years by people trying to get the family's money deposited in the West— which he estimated at $400 million.
